COMING BACK.

They say if our beloved dead
Should seek the old familiar place,
Some stranger would be there instead,
And they would find no welcome face.

I cannot tell how it might be
In other homes, but this I know—
Could my lost darling come to me,
That she would never find it so.

Ofttimes the flowers have come and gone,
Ofttimes the winter winds have blown,
The while her peaceful rest went on,
And I have learned to live alone;

Have slowly learned from day to day,
In all life's tasks to bear my part;
But whether grave or whether gay,
I hide her memory in my heart.

Fond, faithful love has blessed my way,
And friends are round me true and tried;
They have their place, but hers to-day
Is empty as the day she died

How would I spring with bated breath,
And joy too deep for word or sign,
To take my darling home from death
And once again to call her mine.

I dare not dream the blissful dream;
It fills my heart with wild unrest;
Where yonder cold, white marbles gleam
She still must slumber. God knows best.

The Way To Win.

Edward Stone stood impatiently upon the top step of Uncle Dan's stately residence. There was not the faintest sign of life anywhere around—the whole front part of the house was closed and darkened; and having rung several times without eliciting any response, he was about to conclude there was no one within hearing, when a head was thrust out of the upper window.

"Young man, go round to the side door."

Considerably startled by this unexpected address, the young man obeyed. Upon the porch, brushing away the leaves that covered it, was a young girl of fifteen. She looked very pretty as she stood there, the bright autumnal sunshine falling on her round white arms and uncovered head.

Setting down her broom, she ushered him into a medium-sized, plainly-furnished room which gave no indication of the reputed wealth of its owner.

The young man took a seat, brushed a few flakes of dust from the lapel of his coat, ran his fingers through his carefully arranged locks, and thus delivered himself:

A faint smile touched the rosy lips, and with a demure "yes, sir" the girl vanished.

A few minutes later an elderly gentleman entered with intelligent, strong-marked features, and a shrewd look in the eyes, which seemed to take the mental measure of his visitor at a glance.

"Well sir what is your business with me?"

"I am your nephew."

"So my daughter told me. What do you want?"

"I was thinking of going into business, and thought I would come and talk it over with you, and ask you to give me a lift."

"What better capital do you want than you already have? A strong able-bodied young man wanting a lift! You ought to be ashamed of yourself! What have you been doing?"

Edwards face flushed with anger at this unceremonious language, but feeling that he could not afford to quarrel with his wealthy relative, he gave no other indication of it.

"Saved nothing from your salary, I suppose?"

No, it's only five hundred; not more than enough for my expenses.'

"Humph! You are able to dress yourself out of it, I perceive. I have known men to rear and educate a family on five hundred a year; and if you have been unable to save anything, you certainly are not able to go into business on your own account. When I was at your age my income was less than three hundred dollars, and I saved half of it. What is the business you wish to engage in?"

"Stationery and books. Six hundred dollars will buy it, as the owner is obliged to sell; a rare chance. I don't ask you to give me the amount, only lend it; I will give you my note with interest."

"Young man. I have several such papers already. You can have all of them for five dollars; and I warn you that it will prove a poor investment at that! I can give you some good advice, though, which if you follow will be worth a good many times the amount you asked. But you won't do it."

"How do you know that," said Edward with a smile, who began to feel more at home with his eccentric relative. "I'd like to hear it anyway"

"Well, here it is. Go back to your place in the store, save three dollars a week from your salary, which you can easily do; learning the meantime all you possibly can in regard to the business you wish to pursue. At the end of four years you will have the capital you seek, with sufficient experience and judgement to know how to use it. And, better still, it will be yours, earned by your own industry and self-denial, and worth more to you that ten times that amount got in any other way. Then come and see me again."

"You'd rather have my money than advice, I dare say," added Mr. Stone, as Edward arose to go; but we'll be better friends four years hence than if I let you have it. Sit down, nephew, the train you have to take won't leave until six in the evening. You must stay to tea, I want you to see what a complete little housekeeper I have, and make you acquainted with her."

"Polly!" he called out, opening the door into the hall.

In prompt obedience to this summons a rosy cheeked, bright eyed girl tripped in. The neat print dress had been changed for a pretty merino, but our hero did not fail to recognize her, and his face flushed painfully as he did so.

"Polly!" continued her father, "this is your cousin Edward. He leaves on the six o'clock train, and I want his short stay short stay as pleasant as possible."

"Polly is my little housekeeper" he added, "turning to his nephew. "I hire a woman for the rough work, and she does all the rest. When she's eighteen she will have all the servants she wants, but she must serve her apprenticeship first. It may stand her in good stead; she may take it into her head to marry a poor man, as her mother did before her. Eh! my girl?"

Mary's only reply to this was a smile and blush. Our hero was considerably embarassed by the recollection of the mistake he made, but the quietly cordial greeting of his young hostess soon put him comparatively at rest.

At her father's request—who was very fond of his daughter's accomplishments—Mary sang and played for her cousin, and his visit ended in singular contrast to the stormy way it commenced. Edward refused the five dollar note tendered to him at parting for his traveling expenses.

The old man smiled as he returned the note to his pocketbook.

"He's a sensible chap, after all," he remarked to his daughter, as the door closed after the guest. "It's in him, if it only can be brought out. We shall see, we shall see."

"A good deal for father to say," was Mary's inward comment, who thought her cousin the most agreeable young man she had ever met.

Three years later Mr. Stone and his daughter paused in front of a small but neat, pleasant-looking shop, on the plate-glass door of which were the words:—"Edward Stone, Stationery and Bookstore."

It being to early in the day for customers, they found the proprietor alone, whose face flushed with pride and pleasure as he greeted them.

"I got your card, nephew, said the old man with a cordial grasp of the hand, "and called around to see how you were getting on. I thought it was about time I gave you that little lift you asked me for three years ago. You don't look much as if you needed it though."

"Not at present, thank you, uncle," was the cheerful response. Curiously enough it is the same business that I wanted to buy then. The man who took it had to borrow money to purchase it with, getting so much involved that he had to sell it at a sacrifice."

"Just what you wanted to do."

Edward smiled at the point made by his uncle.

"It isn't what I have done, though I've saved four dollars a week from my salary for the last three years, and so, was not only able to pay the money down, but had fifty dollars besides."

"Bravo! my boy," cried the delighted old man, with another grasp of the hand that made our hero wince. I am proud of you! You're bound to succeed, I see, and without anybody's help. I told your cousin Polly that when she was eighteen I'd buy her a house in the city, and that she should furnish it to suit herself, and have all the servants she wanted, and I've kept my word. Come around and see us whenever you can. You'll always find the latch string out."

Edward did not fail to accept the invitation so frankly extended—a very pleasant intimacy growing up between the three during the twelve months that followed. Our hero's business grew and prospered until he began to think of removing to a larger place. His uncle had given him several liberal orders, as well as sent him a number of customers, but said nothing more about assisting him in any other way until Christmas eve. Entering the room where Edward and his daughter were sitting, he said:

"I musn't delay any longer the little lift I promised you, nephew, and which you have well earned."

Edward glanced from the five thousand dollar check to the lovely face at his side, and then to that of the speaker.

"You are very kind uncle—far kinder than I deserve—but—"

"But what, lad? Speak out! would you prefer it in some other form?"

Edward's fingers closed tenderly and strongly over the hand he had taken in his.

"Yes, uncle—in this."

The old man looked keenly from one to the other.

"You are asking a good deal, nephew. Polly, have you been encouraging this young man in his presumption."

"I'm afraid I have, father," was the smiling response.

"Then go, my daughter. I give you into worthy keeping, and if you make your husband's heart as happy as your mother did mine during the few short years that she tarried by my side, he will be blest indeed."

Hints in Regard to Lightning.

It is never too soon to go in the house when a storm is rising. When the clouds are fully charged with electricity they are most dangerous, and the fluid obeys a subtle attraction which acts at a great distance and in all directions. A woman told me of a bolt which came down her mother's chimney from a rising cloud when the sun was shining over head. N. P. Willis writes of a young girl who was killed while passing under a telegraph wire, on the brow of a hill, while she was hurrying home before a storm. The sad accident at Morrisania, when two children were killed, should warn every mother that it is not safe to let children stay out of doors the last minute before the storm falls. People should not be foolhardy about sitting on porches or by open windows whether the storm is hard or not. Mild showers often carry a single charge, which falls with deadly effect. It may or may not be safe to stay out; it is safe to be in the house with the windows and doors closed. The dry air in a house is a readier conductor than the damp air outside, and any draught of air invites it. A hot fire in a chimney attracts it, so to speak, and it is prudent for those who would be sure of safety to use kerosene or gas stoves in summer, and avoid heating the chimneys of houses. People are very ignorant or reckless about lightning. I have seen a girl of eighteen crying with fear of lightning, and running every other moment to the window to see if the storm was not abating, unconscious that she was putting herself in danger. If every one would hurry to shelter as soon as a storm cloud was coming, and if they would shut the doors and windows, and keep away from them afterwards, and from wires, stove pipes, mantels, heaters and mirrors, with their silvered backs, which carry electricity, and keep away from lightning rods and their vicinity, and from metal water spouts, with good rods on their houses they might dismiss the fear of lightning from their minds, so far as it is a thing of reason and not impression.

What Brains Bring.

Our best authors have, as a rule, made very little money. Some of them, like Longfellow, Lowell and Holmes, have an independence without work. Emerson and Whittier live very simply and plainly, and this fact explains why their earnings support them. Hawthorne was very poor until he had been appointed Consul at Liverpool; Poe was always in pecuniary distress, and would have been pressed by circumstances had his habits been provident. Mrs. Stowe made by "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which, in the same time, has had a larger sale than any other work since the invention of printing, not much over $10,000, although her publishers got rich by the world renowned anti-slavery novel.

The most capable and industrious litterateur can seldom earn more than $4,000 to $5,000 a year at the extreme, while unquestionably clever, energetic fellows are obliged to content themselves with from $1,500 to $2.000. A glance at some of our best known and most popular authors, resident in or near New York, will show that the ink they use is far from golden. The vete ran William Cullen Bryant was moderately wealthy; but he had not grown so by his poetry or by any of the works to which he had lent his name, but which he had not written. He owed his fortune to his partial ownership of the Evening Post for the last 35 or 40 years. Worth probably $500,000 or $600,000 at the lowest, and getting $50,000 to $60,000 per annum from all sources, it may be doubted if his entire literary work would have yielded him $20,000. Bryant's love of dollars is wholly disproportioned to his professional capacity to earn them. He has been writing in his slow, deliberate, painstaking and painsgiving way for 65 years—he did the "Thanatopsis" at 18, and has never quite equalled it since—and yet at no time could he have got $4,000 or or even $3,000 per annum by the direct use of his pen. While the publisher has prospered the poet might have starved.

Parke Godwin, Bryant's son-in-law, is a brilliant litterateur as well as journalist, and is pecuniarily independent. He owes his independence, however, to his interest in the Evening Post—he has had no connection with it, editorially or otherwise, for several years—not to his literary talent. The books he has published have returned him a few thousands of dollars, and his lectures in the past have helped out his income; but he would have been poor deprived of what the Post has brought him.

Bayard Taylor was one of our most popular authors—his books of travel have had a very wide sale—and he has been remarkably diligent with his pen from early youth. As a lecturer he had been extremely popular—he cleared $10,000 year before last by the lyceum—having made more as a lecturer than as author. His reputation as a traveler and a describer of travels did not please him, notwithstanding it has been profitable. His high ambition was poetic and he was a poet; but the great public regarded him as a traveler. We doubt if his "Life of Goethe," on which is excellent, paid him for any part of his great labor. At a liberal estimate, if the times were what they have been, Taylor might have been worth $70,000 to $80,000, much of which he obtained from dividends on his five shares of Tribune stock. Taylor drew a journalistic salary of $5,000.

Richard Grant White may be considered a successful author. He has been before the public over a quarter of a century, and his Shakespeare has gained him the title of scholar on both sides of the sea. It is undeniably the ablest work on the dramatist that has been produced by any American, and he is a man of large and varied culture. He studied law, and medicine after graduating, not with a view to practicing, but for the sake of increasing his knowledge. Now, beyond fifty, he literally wins his bread by contributing to the daily press and the magazines; he frequently writes editorials for the Times and Evening Post, notwithstanding he holds a position in the Custom House at $2,500 a year.

George William Curtis, one of the daintiest and most polished writers in the Republic, and yet a strong and positive intellect, has been for years engaged on the periodical publications of the Harper's. He writes the political editorials of the Weekly the Editor's Easy Chair of the Monthly, and until recently wrote the discursive, elegant essays which appeared in the Bazar, over the signature of "Old Bachelor." His salary from the Harpers is $10,000 a year, which is one of the largest paid in the city. He had but $4,000 until 1869, when the death of Henry J. Raymond, and the desire of the Times to supply his place, induced its publishers to offer Curtis $10,000. Curtis declined to become editor of the Times, preferring to remain with the old firm. Its members heard of the offer, though not through Curtis, and immediately advanced his salary to the figure named—as much, no doubt, from fear of losing him as from a sense of generosity. Curtis is a native of Providence, R. I., well bred and well educated.

Machine Guns at Sea.

Though the German admirality has decided that every German man-of-war shall in the future carry at least one machine-gun, mainly for use against attacking torpedo boats, though, of course, such a weapon would be also well suited for a multitude of other purposes for which light guns are generally used in navy warfare, the particular pattern or machine-gun to be adopted has apparently not yet been definitely selected. At least two German establishment have designed and constructed machine-guns which have passed successfully through a series of preliminary trials and which, it is reported, will now be tried in competition with one another and with several foreign pieces, such as the Nordenfelt and Hotchkiss guns, the latter of which has now been adopted by the navies in France, Holland, Greece, the United States, Chili, the Argentine Republic, Russia and Denmark. The machine-guns of German manufacture are some of them Krupp's and others from the Wittener steel foundry. The Krupp weapon is in form of a revolving cannon, consisting of four barrels twenty-seven inches long, with a calibre of one inch. The projectile weighs half a pound, while the charge consists of fifty grammes, or very nearly two ounces of powder, the whole cartridge, including the case, weighing 355 grammes, or twelve one-half ounces, while the total weight of the gun itself is 359 pounds. The Wittener naval mitrailleuse has also four barrels, and, like the Krupp revolving cannon, throws a bullet weighing a trifle over eight ounces, while the charge consists of seventy grammes, or two and one-half ounces, of powder.

Gloves.

Skins with hair on were frequently used in the Middle Ages, as according to the passage of Musconians quoted by Casaubon, they had been by the ancients. They are frequently mentioned as having been worn by husbandmen of England. Casaubon notes the circumstance that the rustics of our day made use of gloves. There is nothing in that passage to show that he was speaking of this country: he may very possibly have seen it in France. In England, at any rate, "the monastery of Bury allowed its servants 2 pence apiece for glove silver in autumn," (Pegge Missc, Carr.,) and at a later date, in Laneham's account of the entertainment of Queen Elizabeth at Kenilworth Castle, 1575, the rural bridegroom had "a pair of harvest gloves as a sign of good husbandry," Upon the coronation of Petrarch at Rome as the "prince of poets," gloves of otter-skin were put on his hands, the satirical explanation being given that the poet, like the otter, lives by rapine. The modern ladies' glove of four-and-twenty buttons has had its prototype, for in the fourteenth century the nobility of France began to wear gloves reaching to the elbow. These gloves were, at times, like the more familiar stockings, which they must have much resembled, used as purses. Notwithstanding their length, it was always looked upon as decorous for the laity to take off their gloves in church, where ecclesiastics alone might wear them. The custom still obtains in the Church of England at the Sacrament, though it is plain that it had not arisen in this connection in the first instance, since in the Roman ritual the communicant does not handle the consecrated wafer. It was, perhaps, regarded as a proof and symbol of clean hands, for to this day persons sworn in our law courts are compelled to remove their glove. There is probably, too, some relation between this feeling and a curious Saxon law, which forbade the Judges to wear gloves while sitting on the bench. The gloves of the Judges were, like those of the Bishops, a mark of their rank. The portraits of the Judges, painted by order of the Corporation of London, in the reign of Charles II, and hanging in the courts of Guildhall, represent them with fringed and embroidered gloves. It was probably not in reference to the Judges that a cant term for a bribe was a "pair of gloves." When Sir Thomas More was Chancellor he happened to determine a cause in favor of a lady named Croaker, who displayed her gratitude by sending him a New Year's gift of a pair of gloves, with forty angels in them. Sir Thomas returned the money, with the following letter: "Mistress:—Since it were against good manners to refuse your New Year's gift, I am content to take your gloves, but as for the lining, I utterly refuse it.

WHO CAN VOTE.

The next election in Pennsylvania will be held on Tuesday, November 2, 1880.

Voters must be assessed two months before the election—that is, on or before September 2.

The assessors must be at the election house on Wednesday and Thursday, September 1st and 2nd, from 10 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M. of each day, for the purpose of correcting the list of voters, by adding names thereto or striking them off.

The committee men of the respective election districts should attend at the time the assessor sits to correct the list.

To secure their votes, voters must have paid a State or county tax one month before the election and within the two years immediately preceding the date of one month before the election. The last day for paying tax this year is October 2nd.

Members of Democratic state, county and city committees should see to it that every voter of our party has complied with the law.

Failure to pay tax in season deprives the voter of the privilege of voting. An elector can swear in his vote though he be not assessed. But the neglect may cause much trouble.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL TICKET,

FOR PRESIDENT,
GEN. WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.
Of Pennsylvania.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
HON. WM. H. ENGLISH,
Of Indiana.

STATE TICKET.

SUPREME JUDGE,
GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson Co,

AUDITOR GENERAL,
ROBERT P. DECHERT, Philadelphia.

HANCOCK'S LETTER.

He Settles the Bugbear of Rebel Claims.

General Hancock has written a letter on the matter of rebel debts, rebel claims and pensions, in answer to a letter from Hon. Theodore Cook, of Cincinnati. The General's letter is a clincher on the subject and will effectually silence all who use such weak and uncandid arguments to influence voters. We know that such flimsy and contemptible stuff has been used in this neighborhood upon Republican soldiers who are more than half inclined to vote for Hancock. Here is the letter:

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N. Y., September 23.—To Theodore Cook, Esq., Cincinnati, Ohio—DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 20th inst., has been received. I regret that you are disturbed about that bugbear, southern war claims. The people cannot be mislead by it. To suppose that rebel claims or claims in the interest of persons who were in the rebellion can in any way or any degree be countenanced, is an imputation of disloyalty such as used to be made against Democrats, even when they were in arms defending the country. So far as it touches me, I denounce it. The government can never pay a debt or grant a pension, or reward of any sort for waging war upon its own existence, nor could I be induced to approve or encourage the payment of such debt, pension or reward. Nobody expects or wants such unnatural action. To propose it would be an insult to the intelligence and honor of our people. When the rebellion was crushed the heresy of secession in every form and in every incident went down forever. It is a thing of the dead past. We move forward, not backward. If I were president I would veto all legislation which would come before me providing for the consideration or payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in the rebellion, whether pardoned or not. In relation to Union war claims the government's obligations to its defenders come first. They are lasting and sacred. The public laws of civilized nations do not, in general, recognize claims for injuries to property resulting from the operations of war. Nevertheless our government has treated with great indulgence the claims for losses and damages suffered by Union men from military operations of the war of the Union. But as hostilities were closed more than fifteen years ago, claims of that nature, now mostly in the hands of brokers or persons others than the original sufferers, are becoming stale and in my judgement might fairly be considered as barred by the lapse of time and if hereafter entertained at all should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny.

Yours very truly,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY, NEW YORK, INDIANA AND OHIO.

Ex-Senator William H. Barnum, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, returned yesterday from the West. He says that Indiana will surely go Democratic in the October election, and that Ohio is not certain for the Republicans.

Mr. B. B. Smalley, member of the Democratic National Committee from Vermont, returned from his state yesterday. He said in relation to the Maine election:

"I have just returned from Vermont, and I was astonished to find the effect produced there by the news from Maine. It has greatly depressed the Republicans, and created a great deal of enthusiasm for Hancock. I do not expect, of course, that the Republican majority in Vermont will be wiped out but I am disposed to believe that the majority of September will be reduced in November."

"Is not the Plaisted vote a plurality, and will not the Legislature, being Republican, seat Davis?" the reporter asked.

"Oh I don't know about that!" Mr. Smalley replied. "In the first place, the Unionists claim that a plurality elects, and Senator Blaine is apparently of the same opinion. You have read his dispatch to Governor Jewell. In that he says: 'If Governor Plaisted shall have a single vote more than Governor Davis, the Executive chair of Maine for the next two years is as well assured to him as though his majority were 10,000.' Mr. Blaine is certainly neither a careless nor an ignorant man. He unquestionably believes that a plurality elects."

Ex-Governor Bedle, of New Jersey, Committee's rooms yesterday. He said: New Jersey is sure to cast her electoral vote for Hancock and English. Ever since the Cincinnati nominations the enthusiasm among the Democracy of the state has been on the increase. The Democrats are united everywhere, and our candidates will receive many votes heretofore given to the Republican party by independent voters. Our nominee for governor is a popular man, and he is growing stronger every day. I predict a handsome Democratic majority for the national and state tickets in my state."

It would seem that the great Republican leaders are indirectly doing their level best for the election of Hancock to the Presidency. Cameron was urged to accept the chairmanship of the national committee and direct the campaign, but he was much too sick a man even to think of it. It is an open secret, though, that he takes no stock in Garfield. Blaine loses Maine in the preliminary battle, and this makes that heretofore Republican stronghold sure for Hancock. Conkling has not opened his mouth until recently, when he made a speech in New York which he must know will do Hancock more good than Garfield. He waves the bloody shirt so furiously—the tone and temper of his speech is so ultra and extreme and altogether so unseasonable, that thousands of Republicans will be driven by it into the ranks of the Democracy.

Logan, the last and least of the great Republican leaders has not been heard from at all since the campaign opened.

THE CAUSE OF REPUBLICAN ALARM.

From the New York Evening Post, Republican.

The Republicans are alarmed and uneasy at the aspect of their canvass. The result in Maine was a surprise to to them because it revealed an unexpected disaffection in their own ranks. The result in Indiana and Ohio they believe to be entirely uncertain. But they have themselves to blame. The American people are not fools or blind. When they see a political party, conservative in May, wheel around to the extremest policies in September; when they see a candidate, long committed in the most positive manner to wise and national policies, suddenly and publicly abandon the conservative position which alone gave him the popular confidence and good-will, and become the ally of the extremest Bourbonism of his party, how can all this fail to shake the confidence of the voters and fill them with suspicion and disgust?

A DEMOCRATIC METHUSELAH.

Benjamin Brownfield, Aged 101 Years, Makes a Hancock Speech.

Special Dispatch to THE TIMES.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., September 20.

An interesting meeting was held by the Democrats of Monroe, Fayette county, on Saturday night. Colonel Benjamin Brownfield, a wealthy farmer, aged 101 years presided. There were six vice presidents on the platform with him, whose united ages reach 509 years. Colonel Brownfield, in opening the meeting, said:

Providence has been very kind to me in prolonging my life and blessing me with health and strength. I have lived to be 101 years old. This is a great age. In my earlier days I took an active part in politics. I have mingled with your fathers and grandfathers and great-grandfathers on occasions like this in days long gone in the past. I voted for Thomas Jefferson for President in 1800. We had the same question up then that we have now, whether this was a government of unlimited powers or a government of a few simple functions expressly granted by the Constitution. Mr. Jefferson contended that the great mass of the powers of our government remained with the States, while Mr. Adams and his party contended for a strong central government to override the State governments. I never missed a Presidential election. I voted for Van Buren and also for Polk, Cass, Pierce, Buchanan, Douglass, McClellan, Seymour, Greely and Tilden, and I hope to live to vote for General Hancock, and as the result of my long experience I would advise you to vote for him too.

The vice presidents were: John Trautman, 94 years; Colonel James Gardner, 86; James Snyder, 85; L. M. Clawson, 82; George Morrison, 81, and Thomas Semans, 81.

A PEN FOR GENERAL HANCOCK.

A Presentation to the Candidate on Governor's Island —His Response.

NEW YORK, September 22.—General Hancock, on returning to Governor's Island from the city yesterday, found ex-Congressman Hooker, of Mississippi, ex-Senator M. H. Bovee, of Wisconsin, General Averill and Colonel Miller, of Pennsylvania, awaiting him. In the evening a delegation from the Phil Kearney guard, company C, Third regiment, New Jersey militia, called to present him a $60 gold pen, the handle of which is studded with diamonds. The guard recently held a charity fair, and the pen was to be awarded to the presidential candidate who received the most votes. Of the votes, 375 were cast for General Hancock, 330 for Garfield, and 20 for Weaver. The spokesman of the delegation was Sergeant Henry J. Stratemeyer, Jr., and the general, in returning thanks for the pen, said that he had a strong regard for the city of Elizabeth, as being the former home of General Winfield Hancock and Colonel Clarke, his early commander, whose son-in-law, General Bumford, he sometimes visited there. The city also recalled to mind his mother, whose name was Elizabeth.

Mr. George Neuhauer of the delegation hoped that the general would write the inaugural address with the pen. The general replied by exhibiting two turkey quills, saying that they had been presented to him for the same purpose, and in case of his election, he would use all three.

In the nomination of Messrs. Murray and Gephart for members of the legislature, our county convention did a wise act, settled an open question and established a safe precedent. There are strong reasons why our members should have at least two terms, while every argument in favor of the one term principle is based on personal or local grounds. If Centre county—famous for her great men—would maintain her high standing and prestige in the legislative councils of the state, she must not send new men, however fit and worthy, every term. It requires much application and some time for any new member to become familiar with the rules and usages of the House, without a fair knowledge of which he can effect but little for or against my measure upon which he may be compelled to act. There are other reasons why our members should be permitted to acquire some experience in legislation. They should know something of the dark and wicked ways often used to defeat the will of the people and rob them of their treasure; and this they can hardly be expected to acquire if they are allowed but a single term.

Messrs. Murrry & Gephart have represented their constituents faithfully and well. They fully deserve a renomination and re-election at the hands of the party, and an increased majority will be the fitting tribute of an appreciative people.

ARCHERY CONTESTS: Glass Ball Shooting matches. Rifle Target Shooting at 150 yards will be among the figures at the coming fair.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. Sept. 25, 1880.

One thing which has puzzled the Republicans all through the campaign is the enourmous size of Democratic meetings even in Republican strongholds. In Maine, with hardly any campaign fund, the Democratic and Greenback gatherings were almost invariably larger than those of the Republicans, though the latter have an enormous fund with which to purchase the presence of every idle man or boy. The Republicans had what they thought a large meeting in this city, but almost without effort the Democracy followed with one twice as large. The truth seems to be that the people are heartily in favor of the election of General Hancock, and are glad to show their preference for him. Laborers, merchants, bankers,—all get into the processions, or seen at the meetings. But the greatest of meetings was that in New York on Thursday night, at which, as the World says, the whole city turned out. I think the peculiarity mentioned as to meetings, the most significant features of the campaign.

General Hancock, in a letter defining his position on the subject of what are called "rebel claims," saying he would, if elected, veto any measure which proposed any payment, reward, or pension for services against the union. As to claims of union men for loss and damages resulting from the war, he thinks in view of the fact that hostilities ceased fifteen years ago, and that the claims have mostly fallen into the hands of speculators or brokers, they may fairly be considered as barred by lapse of time, and, if hereafter entertained at all should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny. I have always thought it good policy for a party to make its platform, one for the Candidate, in accepting a nomination, to express his views upon the platform and then in peace and quietness await the result of the campaign. But Gen. Hancock has seen fit to refer to this vexed subject, and has certainly done so in a war which ought to stop forever the lying of the Radical press about "rebel claims."

Ohio Republicans in this city are being urged to go to that State, and many have already gone. The managers of the Republican campaign are in a panic about their Candidate's own State. The National Republican of yesterday morning also contained a lengthy editorial appeal for greater activity in Ohio. Our Democratic friends do not claim Ohio, but say they have a fair fighting chance for it. Every letter received by the Democratic Congressional Committee from the other October States, Indiana, Georgia and West Virginia, gives assurances of —Next Saturday there is to be a big Pole raising at Clintondale, Clinton county at which occasion first-class addresses will be delivered. Ex-Governor Curtin and Hon. C. T. Alexander are the speakers. Several bands will be present.

—J. R. VanOrmer did a noble deed when he presented us with that fine Hancock Book. Just like him, though—he does give expecting nothing in return. But such the Lord has promised to bless, and we trust Reese will come in for his full share.

—Samuel Gramley, Trustee will offer at public sale Tuesday October 26th, next, one of the most valuable farms in Brush Valley. The farm contains 282 acres, of which over 100 is well timbered with oak, pine, hemlock and chestnut. Here is a rare chance for a profitable investment.

—DEININGER & MUSSER have just received a car load of marble direct from the quarries at Sutherland Falls, Vermont. This system of buying stock in large quantities from first hands enables them to sell work cheaper than other establishments that buy from jobbers.

—The Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association will hold its sixteenth annual convention in Lancaster, Pa., Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 12th, 13th and 14th.

Rev. John Hall, D. D., New York; Rev. P. S. Henson, D. D., Rev. B. T Vincent and John Wanamaker, Philadelphia; Rev. James H. Dubbs, D. D., Lancaster; James McCormic, Harrisburg; Rev. B. Young, Altoona, and other eminent Sunday School workers will be present. Hotel accommodations will be ample and cheap. 4t

DON'T.—Don't let your angry passions rise when you discuss politics. Don't get mad and call the other fellow a liar. It can do no good and may much harm, if not to the "cause" then certainly to yourself. If you insist on talking politics on street corners and in stores don't forget that you are a man, a neighbor, perhaps a friend to the opposite man. Conduct yourself so that when the campaign is over you will have no pardons to ask for insults given; no bitter feeling and heartburnings to heal up against such with and about whom you must live every day. Don't do it.

WM. C. HEINLE, ESQ., deserves to receive every Democratic vote in the county. He is a young lawyer of ability and merit and has worked his way up to his present social and professional standing from a poor boy. He will make a capable and faithful public officer, in whose hands the commonwealth business of the county can be safely trusted. He will not be ashamed to speak Deutsch to his old neighbors and friends when they will have occasion to visit him on business or pleasure, after his election, for elected he will be, of course, and we hope that the valleys where everybody knows him, will give him their full vote.

"The melancholy days have come
The saddest of the year."

There now—don't you say that we are just trying to pe the first one this year to remind you of the coming stern season in the poets immortal lines. No; it is not the frightened hare nor the rustling leaf that makes us sad; there is'nt poetry enough in our soul for that; but the thought that soon—ah! very soon, we need—yea must have—lots of coal, wood, apples, potatoes, for those dependent on uses, to say nothing of a new supply of shoes and other clothing in which to appear decent and keep warm. These and the thoughts of a shrunken, shriveled and mostly empty purse, are what make our poor heart so tender. The trying realities of life—not the poetry—yes, there's the rub.

—The gunning season is at hand, and it is now in order to warn persons against the careless handling of fire-arms. The skilled sportsman never risks his own life or that of others by holding or carrying his gun in such a position as to endanger any one by its discharge. He appreciates the dangerous character of his weapon, and is, therefore, careful in handling it. Now that breech-loading arms are so generally used, there is no excuse for keeping them loaded, but whether loaded or not, the muzzle should at all times be kept away from the body. It is just as easy to acquire careful habits in handling guns as to get other habits that place one in constant danger of being self-wounded or perhaps killed.

—Mr. L. B. Frank, of Rebersburg just dropped in a moment the other morning to see us, on his way to the city for goods. Lute can't get over his big, Democratic heart to slight us—he always calls. Has such a warm feeling for the Journal, its editors and correspondents.

—Mrs. David Shafer of Brush Valley brought us two cabbage heads the other day weighing respectively 6 pounds 6 ounces and 6 pounds 4½ ounces. It is of the new and popular Hancock kind, is thoroughly solid and has a most delicious flavor. Now if any rampant radical rapscallion can do better let him or her step to the front or forever hereafter shut up on the krout kwestion.

THE CENTRE COUNTY FAIR.—The premium list for the Centre County Fair was distributed last week, and has no doubt given satisfaction, as the amounts to be awarded are more liberal than usual. The Fair will open on the 6th of October, and, from all that we have been able to learn, will be an entire success. Much interest seems to have been awakened in all parts of the county, which presupposes a large number of entries and an enticing and beautiful display. The ladies, we understand, intend to be fully represented by all the useful and beautiful articles that ladies manufacture, while the farmers, the stock-raisers, the mechanics, machinists, etc., etc., propose to contest for the premiums in the liveliest manner. The Fair will continue for three days, and Thursday, the 7th, will as usual be the "big day" of the exhibition. Entries will be received until and on the first day, and we hope every man, every woman, every boy and every girl who has anything interesting to show will put it on exhibition. Whoever has the best, the biggest, the prettiest, the cleanest,—no matter what of,—or the most tasteful and ingenious, will get premiums, and whoever gets a premium will of course have a proud feather in his or her cap. So let all make up their minds to contribute something to make the Fair generally attractive and interesting.

THE MEETING IN AARONSBURG.

The Democratic meeting in Aaronsburg on Saturday evening was a large and lively one, yet everything passed off in best order. The Democrats of Brush Valley had promised to turn out in force and most nobly did they redeem their promise. They came in uniform, with music and torches, and were joined here by the Millheim delegation, which was also headed by our cornet band. The entire procession that left here was large and presented a beautiful, imposing appearance. The people present at the meeting must have numbered nearly one thousand, and it was perhaps the largest night meeting ever held in this end of the county.

The meeting was organized by appointing D. A. Musser, Esq., President, assisted by a number of vice presidents, J. H. Reifsnyner and J. W. Runkle, Secretaries. J. L. Spangler, Esq., and Senator C. T. Alexander delivered speeches. These were at once able, eloquent, comprehensive, and as we believe convincing. They were well received by the vast crowd.

The valleys are thoroughly shaken up and will give a good account of themselves at the election.

SPRING MILLS ITEMS.

The Hancock boom is still booming. A meeting of the Gregg Hancock Club at Decker's school house was addressed by W. C. Heinle and Hon. F. Kurtz, both making telling speeches. Mr. Kurtz made the boss speech of the evening. The club will have another meeting in Brush Valley Thursday evening Sep. 30th.

Mr. A. E. Miller has gone to Tyrone and is now firing an engine there. His family will soon follow.

Our community was painfully grieved on Saturday morning by the death of Josey A. Jordan, who was taken sick with putrid sore throat on Tuesday previous. Our loss is his eternal gain.

The boss picnic was held in the Seven Mountains on Saturday. Everybody was surprised and pleased. All present enjoyed themselves very much. The day will long be remembered with pleasure by all in attendance.

Mr. T. B. Jamison is able to get around again with the use of a cane. Hope he may soon be able to lay it aside. His bruised foot is very much better.

UNCLE TOM.

Among agents and families, the great demand now is for the new light running Combination Sewing Machine, because it has stood the test, and is better made, with more improvements, will last longer, and is much lower in price, (only $20,) than other machines, and having attained a merited popularity among the people for reliability, it is welcomed wherever it makes its appearance. It is built for strength and constant hard work, has interchangeable working parts, manufactured of fine polished steel, and will run for years without repairs; is simple to learn, easy to manage, understood perfectly in an hour, and always ready to do every description of heavy or fine family work at less cost, more easily, smoothly, and faster, and with less labor or trouble than any other machine at any price, ever did, or can do. Tuckers, quilters, rufflers, hemmers, binders, &c., free with each machine. No advance payments. Machines shipped to any R. R. station for examination before payment of bill. Agents make money rapidly, supplying the great demand for this the Cheapest Machine in the world. Territory free. News Miscellany.

A FAMINE AT HOME.

DES MOINES, Ia., September 23—Levi Johnson, of Norton county, Kansas, is here soliciting aid for the people in Phillips, Sherman, Decatur, Sheridan, Rawlins and other counties. In Norton county 1,800 people are in absolute want of food. The wheat crop in all the above named counties failed and in June was plowed up and planted in corn, which has been destroyed by the worms. A public meeting will be held here this evening to procure supplies.

Henry Herbert Crane lived childless at Grafton, Ohio, until he was 65, then his young wife gave birth to twins. The joyous father hired a band of music and marched through the village bearing a banner on which was inscribed the word, "victory."

John Sweet of Buena Vista, Iowa, grew tired of his old wife and gave her half of his property for a release from his matrimonial bond, then he eloped with a younger woman, who speedily stole his remaining money and deserted him. Disheartened and penniless, he returned to his wife, and she took him in.

It is stated in the newspapers from the various counties that the potato crop in Lancaster, Chester and Berks will be almost a total failure.

An elephant travelling in a car next the locomotive on an Indiana railroad, opened the tank, drank all the water, and so compelled the train to stop.

John Y. Smith and family arrived in Norristown from Ellis county, Kansas, a few days ago, having traveled the entire distance in a wagon drawn by two mules and two Texas ponies. The family, which consisted of eight persons, started July 7. The members of the family slept on a scaffold of boards on the wagon, and cooked their food by the wayside. Mr. Smith says that he wants no more of the "Go West" cry. He reports that business of all kinds is much worse in Kansas than in Pennsylvania.

The chestnut crop throughout the state promises to be very large.

There are now five hundred men employed at the Pittsburg locomotive works, nearly all of whom work till midnight.

The wife of W. G. Kemp, a wealthy farmer, of Berks county, on Sunday afternoon drowned herself by jumping into the Ontelaunee creek, near their home. She was insane upon religious matters. Two years ago she cut her throat with a razor in the attic, but her life was saved. Later she severed an artery with a razor while in the woods, but timely medical aid prevented her death. She was closely watched afterwards. On Sunday afternoon she was sitting on the veranda of their country home with her husband and children. Mr. Kemp went to the barn a few moments and as soon as he had his back turned the wife embraced her little ones and then rushed to the river, took off her shoes hurriedly and jumped in. Her body was recovered ten minutes afterwards.

AGRICULTURE.

THE MOST ENDURING FENCES.—Of all fences the most enduring and the most satisfying to the eye is the stone wall. If its foundation is well laid it may last as long as the world—which, indeed, it may slowly sink into; or the accumulating layers of earth may in years cover it; but it will still be a wall—a grassy ridge with a core of stone. A wall soon gets rid of its new look. It is not propped up on the earth, but has its foundations in it; mosses and lichens take quickly and kindly to it, and grass and weeds grow out of its lower crevices, mullein and brakes and the bulby stalks of golden-rod spring up beside it. Black raspberry bushes loop along it, over it, and stretch out from it, clumps of sweet elders, shade its sides, and their broad cymes of blossoms, and later, clusters of blackberries, beloved of robins and school-boys, bend over it. When the stones of which it is built are gathered from the fields, as they generally are, they are of infinite variety, brought from the far North by glaciers, washed up by the waves of ancient seas, and tumbled down to the lower lands from the over-hanging ledges. Lumps of gray granite and gneiss, and dull-red blocks of sandstone, f agments of blue lime-stone, and only a geologist knows how many others, mostly with smooth-worn sides and rounded corners and edges. All together, they make a line of beautiful variegated color, and of light and shade. One old wall that I know of has been a rich mine for a brood of callow geologists, who have pecked it and overhauled it, and looked and talked mostly wisely over its stones, and called them names hard enough to break their stony hearts.

SOME THINGS FARMERS SHOULD KNOW.—As a general thing the farmer is liable for all the public injury his hired man may cause while actually employed by him. If he sends him into his lot to burn old brush, and he, for any purpose whatever leaves it and the fire runs into his neighbor's, destroying his fence and injuring his crops the farmer is liable for the damages caused by the wanton neglect of his man. If he sends a hired man on the road with his team, and he, by negligence, runs into another vehicle and injures it, the farmer is liable for the damages; but should the hired man leave the road he was directed to go, and travel another road for his own pleasure, then the farmer would not be liable for the damages should any accident occur. If a hired man, in going to or from the lot with a scythe, and by the careless handling or carrying injures a pas-er-by, the farmer is liable for damage. If in cutting wood the hired man cuts down a tree in another lot, the farmer is liable for trespass and damages, although he distinctly showed him the boundary; and though the man may have cut the tree with malicious ness, run it to a team, even if it block his way, yet the farmer mus pay the damage, though done contrary to his positive order. In all these cases the farmer can compel the hired man to pay him back if he has anything to pay it with; but this is rarely the case unless the farmer keeps back his wages and only settles when his time expires.

VALUE OF COMPOST.—Farmers who know the value of compost, and know how to make it, increase their manure pile. In this way hundreds of loads are made annually, the material being gathered on the premises, such as forest leaves, cornstalks, (including the roots,) weeds, vines, loam from fence corners, muck from ponds and ditches, occasional sprinkling of lime through the mass, layers of barnyard manure, and thus build up oblong squares and let them remain over winter.

CULTIVATED WHEAT AND HESSIAN FLY.—It is now a well established fact that the Hessian fly is much less troublesome on wheat that is sown in drills, between which the cultivator is passed now and then during the early growth of the grain. Two fields of wheat growing side by side, one of which is cultivated and the other not, but alike in all other respects, see n strong proof of the truth of the above statement.

SOME of the best butter makers in England use for every twenty-four pounds of butter one teaspoonful of soda and alum mingled together at the time of churning, and put into the churn. This is for the purpose of rendering the butter firm and solid during warm weather.

An Arctic Noon.

One day Nordenskiold and I walked out to the end of the ice, to enjoy near at hand a sight of the waves dancing in joyous motion and the ice blocks swimming quiety above. Our way was over the ice and walking was exceedingly difficult. When we reached the farthest part of the archipelago, we threw ourselves down to rest and take a view of our surroundings. They were surprisingly grand. The south-western part of the vault of heaven was lighted by the circum-polar moon. In the flood of light which streamed out from her there swam some few long drawn out clouds. Right to the south near the horizon there was visible a faint reddish glimmer, clearly and sharply distinguishable from the white moonlight. Here the sun had gone down, when the long polar night had begun; it was the last glimpse of this light that we now saw. In the south-east some few rays of light changing every moment in strength, color and position—in fact, the aurora in the form it commonly takes here—raised themselves toward the horizon. Above our heads glows the polé star, everywhere over the sky sparkle stars, darting stronger or weaker differently colored lights and on the north or north-eastern horizon rest the deep darkness of the polar night. I will not try to paint the rich charming play of color and the chiaro-scuro full of effect. Add to this glorious heaven a wide stretching sea glittering in the moonlight, the white surface of Mussel Bay with three vessels standing out against it, the dark, precipitous fell sides that surround it, and the little building on land from whose every window lamp-light streams and the main points of the panorama are enumerated. It is difficult to believe that noon is approaching; it might rather be taken for evening, a quiet winter evening in the country. A grave stillness and tranquility. Only now and then the deep silence is broken by a low grating sound. It is heard in the direction of the edge of the ice, and is produced by the rubbing of the ice blocks against each other when they are moved by the swell.

DOMESTIC.

BREAD MAKING.—It is sufficient, as is done Europe, to thoroughly mold and knead the dough in but once, put in the pans, carefully watch its rising, and, when at the right point, to bake it, securing sweet bread and not that from sour dough which can never be made sweet. This, of course implies no use of soda, since it is not needed when the dough is sweet, and since no soda can restore the natural sweetness of the grain. If the dough becomes sour it is because the fermentative process has proceeded too far, approaching the putrefactive stage, an actual waste of no inconsiderable per cent of the nourishment.

While some may question the propriety of this fermentation, all will concede the fact that it should not be raised so much as to become even slightly acid, since sour bread is not only unpalatable but positively harmful. And since a large part of the food of the middle class must consist of bread (we might live quite well on bread and fruits), it is important not only that it shall be agreeable to the taste, but contain as much as possible of the bone and muscle elements to promote the health, especially of the young.

THE SLEEPING ROLL.—The rolls which are often attached to the back of a rocking or easy chair to rest the head against, are sometimes made of silk patchwork or of embroided, linen, as well as of wool knitted or chrocheted. They may be chrocheted in strips, like an afghan, and in the same stitch; or they may be knitted in strips, or they may be knitted in one piece or crocheted in lose chains, with some bright silk for a lining. Measure the width of your chair-back and make a stout linen bag, drawn up at each end, of a length corresponding to that width. The diameter depends upon the mount of support you wish to give to the sleeper's head. Then stuff the bag with the best hair, and after closing it, put on the cover, knitted and crocheted to match the roll in size. Draw up the cover at the ends and put on tassels, and strings to fasten the roll to the chair.

A SUPERIOR OMELET.—Beat six eggs very light, the whites to a stiff froth that will stand alone, the yolks to a smooth thick batter, add to the yolks a small cupful of milk then the pepper and salt to season properly; lastly, stir in the whites lightly. Have ready in a hot frying-pan a good lump of butter. When it hisses pour in your mixture gently and set over a clear fire. It should cook in eight or ten minutes at most. Do not stir, but contrive, as the eggs "set," to slip a broad-bladed knife under the omelet to guard against burning at the bottom. When done lay a hot-dish, bottom upward, on the top of the pan, and upset it and bring the browned side up. Eat soon or it will not be so light. A grand dish for breakfast.

Worthless Stuff.

Not so fast my friend; if you could see the strong, healthy, blooming men, women and children that have been raised from beds of sickness, suffering and almost death, by the use of Hop Bitters, you would say "Glorious and invaluable remedy." See another column.—Philadelphia Press.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GRUEL.—A delicious substitute for gruel is made as follows: One ounce of rice, one ounce of sago, one ounce of pearl barley; put three pints of water and boil gently for three hours, when the liquid should be reduced to a quart. Strain it in exactly the same manner as groat gruel, and flavor with wine, brandy, or anything else that may be suitable. If made a little thicker—say, with an ounce and a half of each ingredient to three pints of water—a jelly will be produced, which may be eaten cold with sugar, fruit, syrups or preserves.

RHUBARB JELLY.—Take one rhubarb, wipe it with a clean wet cloth, peel it and cut it into pieces an inch long. To each pound of rhubarb add three-quarters of a pound of white sugar. Put it to boil for about ten minutes or until the juice is well drawn. Strain it into a preserving pan, let it boil quickly until it clings to the spoon, skim it and put it into jam pots or molds. The quickest way to know if it will set is to drop a little on a plate to cool.

ONE Remedy for One Dollar—there is but one way to cure baldness, and that by using CARBOLINE, a deodorized extract of petroleum, the natural petroleum hair renewer. It will positively do the work and it is the only article that will.

A SERVICEABLE WHITEWASH.—Lime slacked with a solution of salt in water and then properly thinned with skim milk, from which all the cream has been taken, makes a permanent whitewash for out-door work, and it is said renders the wood incombustible. It is an excellent wash for preserving shingles and for all farm buildings.

EXCELLENT BREAD CAKE.—One cup butter, two cups brown sugar, one-half cup raisins stoned and chopped, one and one-half cups dough as raised for bread; mix thoroughly and let it rise in the pans before baking. Spices of all sorts.

OFFENSIVE SMELL IN THE FEET.—Bathe them in a weak solution of permanganate of potassa; one scruple of salt to eight ounces of water.

WIT AND HUMOR.

THE minister stopped at a house last week, and sought to improve the time by giving an 8-year-old boy an instructive lesson in morality. "My boy," said the minister, "I have lived forty-five years, and have never used tobacco in any form, nor told a lie, nor uttered an oath, or played truant, nor —" "Gimminy crickets," interrupted the lad, "yer ain't had any fun at all, have ye?"

A CHARMING widow owns a nice boy and a man wants to be appointed deputy father to the lad. It is only last Sunday that, while the man was strolling with the lad, he asked: "Bub, does your mother bang her hair?" and the fool answered: "Oh, no; but you ought to see her bang dad's head. Guess the minister didn't know everything when he told pap to prepare to die. Prepare, why he was just aching to die."

Beautifiers.

Ladies, you cannot make fair skin, rosy checks and sparkling eyes with all the cosmetics of France, or beautifiers of the world, while in poor health, and nothing will give you such good health, strength, buoyant spirits and beauty as Hop Bitters. A trial is certain proof. See another column.—Telegraph.

A YOUTH having importuned his father for a horse, the indulgent parent presented him with the ancient steed which for years had carried him about the city streets. A few days afterwards the affectionate son interviewed his father and renewed his request, saying: "Father, can't you give me a horse a little nearer my own age that would be more of a companion for me?"

AN æsthetic mid-day meal—At the luncheon hour, Jellaby Postlethwaite enters a pastry cook's and calls for a glass of water, into which he puts a fresh cut lily, and loses himself in contemplation thereof.—Waiter—Shall I bring you anything else, sir? Jellaby Postlethwaite—Thanks, no, I have all I require, and shall soon have done!

"THIS is a nice time of night for you to be coming in," said a mother to her daughter, who returned from a walk at 10 o'clock. "When I was like you," continued she, "my mother would not allow me out later than 7 o'clock." "Oh, you had a nice sort of a mother," murmured the girl. "I had, you young jade," said the mother, "a nicer mother than ever you had."

VEGETINE is now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humors.

HE took her by the hand and gallantly led her up the rocky gorge, cautiously from stone to stone, avoiding the little pools and eddying currents in the brook. But in an unexpected moment her French heel played treacherous and she vanished like a phantom, slipping into two feet of water with grace and skill, and the sun umbrella he so gracefully held above her head didn't prevent her getting wet.

"Sorry, miss," said the good soul, "but our minister is on a vacation, and I hear tell he's going to get married. So you won't have very much of a pastoral time; but you can pick huckleberries I guess Josh knows where they are thick," and the oldest boy suddenly remembered that he hadn't changed his paper collar for two days.

THE gentlemanly caterer at the camp meeting, who charges you seventy-five cents for a fifteen cent breakfast, is requested to start for lower regions in the midst of his awful sins. We notice that the ministers think he is past praying for.

A STRANGER, pasing a churchyard seeing a hearse standing hard by, inquired who was dead. The sexton informed him. "What complaint?" asked the inquisitive one. Said the old man: "There is no complaint; everybody is satisfied."

There is nothing in modern discovery so wonderful and meritorious, as that great labor-saver, Dobbins' Electric Soap, (made by Cragin & Co., Philadelphia.) It tells its story on the first trial. Ask your grocer for it.

"AREN'T you real glad to see us, Farmer Robinson," queried the city belle as he helped her from the stage coach." We have come up to help you harvest your huckleberries, and we are just going to live a real nice pastoral life."

CRAMPS, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa and Dysentery are speedily cured by Dr. Jayne's Carminative Balsam. It removes all soreness of the Bowels, quiets the Stomach, and restores its natural action. As a family remedy for many Affections of the Bowels prevalent among children and adults during the summer months, it is especially recommended, being prompt in its operation, perfectly safe, and easily administered.

DOCTOR'S BILLS.—The man whose Blood and Liver is in good condition is all right even in the midst of epidemics. This has been often noticed in the life of every one. If all would only avail themselves of the advantages of restoring and maintaining the health of the body, there would be fewer doctor's bills and much less sorrow. The one thing needful, and the one recommended above all others, is found in Simmons' Liver Regulator. The testimonials are counted by the thousands, and its merits are undoubted.

"Having passed through the siege of YELLOW FEVER, in 1874, in Savannah, and not having any physician to attend to my family, I resorted to the Regulator, and found it to be a perfect cure and preventive if taken in time. I had two children down with the Fever, used nothing but Simmons' Liver Regulator, and am happy to say it cured them. It will cure and keep off Fever if taken in time.

Hunting Comfort.

Utah cannot be considered as a country possessing inducements to travelers in pursuit of comfort. The vehicles in which its passengers and mail are brought are the most diabolical instruments of torture known to the present day, and would have been the crowning glory of the days of the Spanish Inquisition. They should be called anti-dyspeptics, for they would cure the disease most effectually or kill the patient, probably both. It would only be a question of time and distance, no matter what crime a man might be guilty of. At the end of a ride of fifty miles he would throw up the sponge and confess, and 100 miles would cause him to confess all the crimes in the calendar, whether guilty or not, if there was any propect that he would be speedily put out his misery by death. The mud-wagons of California and Nevada are about as bad as can well be imagined, but they are pleasure carriges compared to the Jakey of Utah. They all seem to have been in use fifty years—patched and tied up with old ropes, curtains torn and dilapidated, cushions originally stuffed with straw which has become chaff and worked itself into hard lumps, the seat-irons running down the backbone, with bolt-heads projecting and the square edges left untouched by a file or hammer; the apology for a back striking just at the weakest point of the victim who rides, the side-irons, equally prominent, insuring black and blue hips, and the side bows of the top placed so as to hit one a whack alongside the head whenever the thing strikes a boulder, which is every two minutes. It matters little what may be a man's character, a ride of 100 miles in one of these instruments of torture will make him an upright citizen for the next few days and fully qualify him for service on a standing committee.

THOUSANDS of lives are destroyed by diseases of the kidneys and liver. Kidney-Wort would save them. Tell the sick of it. If you need a gentle cathartic to relieve the system of accumulated debris take Kidney-Wort. It is efficient and sufficient.—POST.

A Great French Philosopher

once defined a doctor to be "a person who pours drugs, about which he knows little, into a body concerning which he knows less, in order to cure diseases of which he knows nothing," and the empirical, barbarous, useless treatment of piles since the days of Hypocrates, when doctors burned the tumors off with red hot iron, down to the absurd wonder-cures and nostrums of modern quacks, would seem to bear testimony to the wisdom of the Frenchman. The great modern benefactor of the modern race is now admitted by every one to be Dr. Silsbee, the discoverer of an infallible remedy in "Anakesis." This miraculous cure for the most painful of all diseases is regarded as the scientific triumph of the age, and is prescribed and endorsed by physicians of all schools. It is not taken internally, but applied as a suppository directly to the affected part. It gives instant relief, soothes pain as a poultice, presses up the tumors as an instrument, and ultimately cures piles by its medication. "Anakesis," Dr. S. Silsbee's External Pile Remedy, is sold by all first-class druggists. Price $1.00 per box. Samples mailed free to all sufferers on application to P. Neustaedter & Co., Box 3946, New York.
